

What can I do with a major in Religious Studies?

Overview

- The religious studies discipline seeks to provide students with the opportunity to explore the role and significance of religion in human life and culture, grapple with the ultimate questions and issues religion addresses, reflect critically on the nature and meaning of diverse religious beliefs and practices, and investigate thoughtfully those biblical, historical, theological and ethical sources that contribute to the Christian heritage, particularly the Catholic tradition.

- Religious studies courses are designed to encourage thoughtful reflection about matters of faith. You do not have to be religious to study religion at St. Norbert College. You may simply want to explore questions of ultimacy and investigate how religious people grapple with them. But deepening your own faith might be reason enough to embark on a course of study that will challenge and broaden your perspective.

- As a major program in the liberal arts, religious studies helps cultivate a greater sensitivity to the complexity and diversity of Christian beliefs and practices in an increasingly international, multicultural and global environment. Courses in religious studies help develop a student's capacity for critical thinking and sound argumentation, preparing the student for a wide range of professional career choices.
