

The Office of Faculty Development invites you to attend a

A graphic featuring two large blue arrows pointing towards each other. The left arrow contains the word "Teaching" and the right arrow contains the word "Learning". Between the arrows is the word "AND". Below this entire graphic is the word "Workshop".

Teaching AND Learning
Workshop

A series of workshops dedicated to promoting an exchange of ideas about teaching and learning.

“Enhancing Your Courses
Using Online Discussions, Resources, and Learning Objects”

Friday, November 14
3:00 - 4:30 p.m.
Union Shield Room

This workshop is intended to provide information and encourage dialogue about engaging students using online discussions, learning objects, and resources while maintaining the high quality of instruction present at SNC. Some topics to discuss include: levels of online integration, challenges and benefits of online learning objects and discussions, and limits of online or hybrid teaching models.

The following panelists will lead the discussion:

Bola Delano, Assistant Professor of Education

Mary Greenlaw, Associate Professor of Education & Chair of Teacher Education

Scott Kirst, Assistant Professor of Education

Krissy Lukens, Instructional Technology Specialist

Reid Riggle, Associate Professor of Education

There will be ample time for faculty participants to share concerns and experiences, as well as ask questions.