Godfrey of Cappenberg and Oda were two very different people from the nobility who embraced the Norbertine ideal. Discuss, using specific episodes from their lives, in what ways both of these nobles, neither of whom were priests, demonstrated in their own lives key elements of Norbertine spirituality.