New and Special Topics Courses

CRN	Course Id	Course Title	Course Description
1633	GENS 489-A	Special Topics: Slavery From Ancient Greece to Antebellum America	This course begins with the institution of slavery as it existed in the ancient western world, then shifts to the legacy of slavery as it played out during the mid-nineteenth century, primarily in the United States. At this point in our nation's history, slavery had coexisted with Christianity and democracy for more than a thousand years, yet emancipated slaves and leaders of the abolition movement crafted non-fiction testimonials and novels designed to eradicate slavery. Emancipated slaves such as Frederick Douglass, Solomon Northrup, and Harriet Jacobs published slave narratives graphically depicting the gross injustices that slaves suffered. They argued that this suffering affected all Americans regardless of their residence in the free or slave states, and they invoked democratic ideals and Christian doctrines to win their readers to the abolitionist cause.
1634	GENS 489-B	Special Topics: Slavery From Ancient Greece to Antebellum America	This course begins with the institution of slavery as it existed in the ancient western world, then shifts to the legacy of slavery as it played out during the mid-nineteenth century, primarily in the United States. At this point in our nation's history, slavery had coexisted with Christianity and democracy for more than a thousand years, yet emancipated slaves and leaders of the abolition movement crafted non-fiction testimonials and novels designed to eradicate slavery. Emancipated slaves such as Frederick Douglass, Solomon Northrup, and Harriet Jacobs published slave narratives graphically depicting the gross injustices that slaves suffered. They argued that this suffering affected all Americans regardless of their residence in the free or slave states, and they invoked democratic ideals and Christian doctrines to win their readers to the abolitionist cause.
1219	GEOG 489-A	Special Topics: Introduction to G.I.S	This lecture/lab course introduces the spatial thinking and basic tools of Geographic Information Systems (GIS). Students will learn G.I.S. theory and apply this knowledge to real-life scenarios in a hands-on computer lab setting-understanding, visualizing and solving geographic problems.
1668	LIST 504-A	Ideas + Issues Natl Sci + Math: Modern Biology Menace/Miracle?	The pace of scientific discoveries and their application continues to outrace our ability to evaluate and manage their impact on society. This is especially true with genetics and the fields of biology with biomedical applications. Adoption of these technologies has created ethical and moral, economic, and social challenges. After providing a basic background to the science, this course will explore the benefits and challenges created by genetic testing, reproductive technologies, stem cell technology, and modern drug development. After completing the readings, class discussions will be followed by weekly writing assignments. Several Laboratory demonstrations will also be offered to provide the opportunity to see several of the technologies firsthand.
1641	POLI 248-A		This course provides an introduction to civil and criminal litigation in the context of the American judicial system with a focus on courtroom procedures, evidence, witness preparation and examination, and the art of advocacy. Although intended for the training of students who hope to compete with the St. Norbert Mock Trial Team, the course is open to any student interested in learning more about the courts and the legal process.
1644	POLI 343-A		Administrative law and politics is the investigation of the relationship of government agencies to legislative and legal institutions and the manner in which government regulates through the bureaucracy. The course also introduces students to the impact agencies have on citizens, businesses, industry, and interest groups through the development and enforcement of legal rules. The course evaluates the political, social, and economics impact of bureaucracies on the operation of various institutions that regulate and influence American life. POLI 130 United States Politics and Government recommended but not required.
1643	RELS 337-A		Christian ethics has recently given more attention to the formation and development of character. This course will examine that development through an extended study of the theological and moral virtues, and consider why they offer a richer understanding of the moral life. It will also study vices (the seven deadly sins) that traditionally have been viewed to be more detrimental to moral formation and human flourishing, paying particular attention to their contemporary manifestations.
1529	SOCI 289-A	Special Topics: Corrections in American Society	This course will focus on society's organized response to individuals accused or convicted of criminal offenses. Students in the course will study: (1) The history, philosophy, theory, and practice of corrections systems and strategies for adults and juveniles; (2) Empirical research reports on the effectiveness of various corrections strategies; (3) Contemporary challenges and debates regarding corrections practices in the United States.
1530	SOCI 289-B	Special Topics: Health, Illness, + Society	Health, just like wealth, is stratified across society. In any country, state, city or neighborhood some people or groups are healthy while others are disproportionately sick. Why? In an effort to answer "why," this course focuses on the sociobehavioral determinants and population distribution of health disparities of the United States. In this class we will examine articles, narratives, charts and graphs, to not only understand disparities in mental and physical health, but to critique them, forming our own opinion along the way. This course intends to provide answers to three central questions: How do health disparities emerge and propagate? How do social institutions and elements of the social environment?especially race-ethnicity, class, gender, and social relationships?influence health? How does health influence education, income, and occupational status?
1553	SPAN 389-A	Special Topics: Contemporary Span. + Span. Amer. Poetry	In this course we will read poetry from a variety of Spanish and Spanish American poets from Modernism to the present. Although there will be opportunities to try our hand at penning some verses, this is not a creative writing course. It is designed for students of Spanish who have completed Spanish 301 or 302 or 305 and are genuinely curious readers. We will read some of the contemporary canonical poets such as Ruben Dario, Pablo Neruda, Gabriela Mistral, Alfonsina Storni, Juan Ramon Jimenez, Antonio Machado, Grederico Garcia Lorca, Nancy Morejon, as well as some less known, but equally phenomenal poets.
